There are other operational risk content providers within the industry, but the majority of them only focus on content about operational risk losses. That can be useful for some operational risk activities such as capital modelling. However, due to the backward looking nature of losses, they are not suitable for forward looking operational risk activities such as risk assessments, scenario development and risk monitoring.

Within the RiskSpotlight Portal our main emphasis is on capturing news articles related to emerging trends and topics on operational risks. Based on our market analysis, we are the only content provider who provides daily updates on forward looking operational risk related news articles and emerging risk topics.
